

Specialist Residential Colleges

Going to a residential college is something you may want to do when you leave school.

These are colleges that you can sleep at in term time.

You can learn the skills you will need to help you live alone or with support, such as:

- » Washing
- » Cooking
- » Using public transport
- » Trying new things like going to the cinema or swimming

At some of these colleges you may be able to do courses that will give you qualifications.

You will need to apply for funding to cover the cost.

There is a useful website and directory that gives you more information about these colleges www.natspec.org.uk
